April Proclaimed Cancer Month

Governor Albertis S. Harrison, Jr., urged every Virginia citizen to observe April as Cancer Control Month and to protect himself from cancer by proper precautions throughout the year, in a statement issued today in support of the American Cancer Society's annual Crusade in Virginia.

In his statement, the Governor said:

"Through research and new techniques, at least half of those who develop the dreaded disease of cancer today can be saved, provided a diagnosis is made early, and prompt and proper treatment applied.

"If we can rely on past experience, approximately 10,000 new cases of cancer will be diagnosed in Virginia during the current year. Many of these can be arrested and those affected restored to healthy lives if cancer's seven danger signals are kept in mind and regular checkups scheduled.

"This is the message the Virginia Division of the American Cancer Society plans to carry door-to-door during its 'Tel It'Oear Neighbor' campaign in April, set aside as Cancer Control Month.

'I urge every citizen to protect himself and others through the appropriate observance of this special effort and by proper precautions throughout the year."

Centennial Dress

Mrs. Lourenia Doss (G. I.), for more than forty years a member of the Times-Virginian staff, paid the Times a visit the other day dressed in her Centennial costume. Hundreds of Centennial costumes will be seen this week end in town and at the National Park here as official hostesses, members of clubs and organizations, and others dress in the mode of 1865-1885 to take part in the 100th Commemoration of Peace at Appomattox.

FFA Sponsors Safety Meet

Cullen Johnson, director of public relations and safety of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation, addressed the student body of Appomattox High School on Tuesday morning. Mr. Johnson, who is a member of the Governor's Highway Safety Committee, spoke on the subject, "Conserving Human Resources." Using the latest statistics on lives lost in the United States and the State of Virginia, Mr. Johnson stressed the need for greater concern on the part of our society for combating the needless and careless lost of life that is now taking place. "We seek ways for preventing death by diseases, so why shouldn't we seek a greater concern for preventing deaths on our highways and streets," stated Mr. Johnson. He further emphasized the need for young people to aid in developing better attitudes on the path of our society for obeying and observing traffic and home safety.

The Robert E. Lee Chapter of the Future Farmers of America sponsored the program for the assembly. Safety, especially on the farm, is an objective of the chapter each year. This year, however, chapter members will seek to further show the importance of improved safety on our farms and in our homes.

Truck Roadeo Planned For August 27-28

APPOMATTOX — The Virginia Truck Roadeo is coming to this vicinity for the first time in its 17 year history, it has been announced by the Virginia Highway Users Association's Council of Highway Safety Supervisors.

The Roadeo is expected to attract professional truck drivers from this community to compete for five top places in the event scheduled for the Pittman Plaza Shopping Center, Lynchburg, on Aug. 27 and 28. The five winners of the Virginia competition will represent the Old Dominion in the National Truck Roadeo in Kansas City in September.

Competition in the annual event, a safety project of the trucking industry, is open to professional truck drivers operating in Virginia with an accident-free record for one year. Roadeo driving problems are designed to represent situations frequently faced by professional truck drivers. As an example, one of the problems requires the driver to pilot his big truck's dueal right wheels through a row of delicately balanced tennis balls with only one inch clearance. For Further information contact: Mr. John Montgomery, Roadeo Publicity Chairman, Overnite Transportation Co., Lynchburg. Business: VI 6-4651; Home: VI 5-7983.

Vacation VIA Virginia

The hold the Civil War had in the hearts and on the imagination of the American people is a phenomenon understandable only as one comes to get a feel for the courage the suffering the triumphs and the defeats incident to that anguished time a century ago.

Some satisfy this inner urge by scanning many-volumed libraries about the war its campaigns and its personalities. Others re-travel, maps and tour pamphlets in hand, the roads and battlefields their grandfathers fought over.

Some few, like Bruce Catton, the writer who will give the dedicatory address at the Appomattox national battlefield park on April 9, make fortunes writing books about the war.

But that barely breed, known as 'reenactment soldiers' because of their frequent appearances all across the land during these four years of the Civil War Centennial, perhaps carries to a pinnacle this attachment to an historical period in the life and trials of the United States.

Motivation

What motivates these fellows, who will descend by the hundreds on Farmville early in April? What makes a man from Texas or Connecticut want to walk from Petersburg to Appomattox today as did the soldiers of Lee and Grant in April 1865? What would make a horseman van his mount from Ohio, or West Virginia or Pennsylvania then ride from the Sayler's Creek battlefield to Appomattox? That's what these intrepid visitors will be doing early next month.

We have been talking with some of them and reading about their families who will be guests during April 7, 8, 9 and 10, on and off.

We've found for one thing they are historians who like to read not from books alone but from life, as well. They like to relive their history. Dr. Sam Kirkpatrick, is typical. Normally, he's a Hanover, Pa., pediatrician. The hard-riding, the tactical daring of the cavalry is a fascinating facet of the war's campaigns. But to Dr. Kirkpatrick this becomes truly alive as one rides the routes on his mount, tethers or picketts the horses at night, or forages for hay and grain (by honest buying, of course) for hungry animals.

Suffering Relived

The tribulations of the 1865 soldiers becomes meaningful to his 1965 counterpart in reenactment. In his initial order to 'interested members or units of the U. S. A. and C.S. A. centennial soldiers," inviting them to Farmville, Dr. Kirkpatrick writes:

"It should be understood that the desk soldier, the paper clerks, medal seekers and those who fear wet weather, mud, sweat and aching muscles are not desired in this venture. However, there are many who wish to pay a part in commemorating the trials and tribulations of the soldiers of the Army of the Potomac and the Army of Northern Virginia, who have volunteered to take part in this event' Those are obviously the words of a man with admiration for the courage, the true-to-their-trust performance of an earlier group of Americans. The best that mankind can give us in the 19th Century heroes is to wear what he wore, to go where he went, ride where he rode, live as he lived. And that is what Dr. Kilpatrick and associates will do.

The Hanover physician plays the role of General J. E. B. Stuart in the reenactments. His immediate unit is 'Headquarters, Stuart's Cavalry Staff.' It includes as the command headquarters and directs the reenactment activities of such units as join in with his group at a particular place or event.

Out-Going People

These skirmishers are outgoing, too. They like to get together; they like to meet new people, participate in the life of another community for a little while. They satisfy this common bond with stews and social events after the reenactment activities.

We find they are proud of their country, of its past and the road it travelled while moving on to world leadership. And, so that sight is never lost of the times that produced the courage of the soldiers of 1861-1865, these men keep the units alive in their home communities.

And lastly these fellows are sportsmen. They have a feel for guns, cannon, muskets. They are experts on Civil War firearms, and they like to shoot their own period weapons when the occasion permits. A firing match at home will do, but best of all is a reenactment. That relives and hour when the musketry and cannoneering was for keeps.

McCann Makes Bid For House Seat

Lynchburg Attorney Frank M. McCann has announced that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Virginia House of Delegates from Lynchburg in the Nov. 2 general election.

Th seat now is held by Del. Thomas R. Glass, Democrat, who announced last week that he will not seek reelection.

In announcing his candidacy, McCann said there are two laws in particular which he would like to see changed.

One of the changes would change Sect. 24-252, Code of Virginia, to make write-in votes in primary elections permissible. The other would do away with the present requirement that a voter must have voted for his party's candidates in the last general election in order to be eligible to vote in that party's primary.

McCann is president-elect of the Lynchburg - Campbell County Young Republicans Club and presently is vice chairman of the Republican Executive Committee. He will give up the latter post when he takes office as head of the YR Club April 1.

In a previous bid for public office McCann, who at that time was a resident of Appomattox, was defeated by Fourth District Rep. Watkins M. Abbitt.

History Books Go On Sale Here

'A History of Appomattox County' by Vara Smith Stanley went on sale here Monday morning, and is now available at Sneed's Pharmacy. Maude's Restaurant, the TIMES-VIRGINIAN, and from the author, herself.

The book, just off the presses of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN, with one hundred pages of narrative and photographs traces the development of the county from its earliest days to its establishment in 1845 and up to the present time.

A full - color reproduction of the newly approved county coat-of-arms is included by the special permission of the Board of Supervisors. A committee from the Rural Area Development Committee did the research and artwork for the original design of the coat-of-arms.

The author, a native of the county and the wife of Sheriff L. L. Stanley, was a special guest of the Woman's Club on Monday evening, and is making TV appearances and talks.

TB Award Given Amelia Man

The Douglas Southall Freeman Award, given each year to the person who has contributed most to the fight against tuberculosis in Virginia, was presented Wednesday, March 31, to Dr. James L. Hamner, of Mannboro, Amelia county.

The annual award, the highest honor conferred by the VTRDA, was established by the association in 1954 in honor of Douglas Southall Freeman, Virginia editor and historian. Dr. Freeman also was the association's second executive director.
